CONGRESS MAY PROBE AFFAIRS IN TREASURY

their regret caused by the resignation of the popular Assistant Secretary. In view of the above facts Dr. Andrew's letter to the President is regarded as voicing the silent protests of all those named against the MacVeagh administration. These officials will be called upon to appear before Congress and describe the conditions that led to Andrew's resignation, in case the Cox resolution passes, even though the President stands by his Secretary without accepting Dr. Andrew's challenge to call the officials before him for a personal investigation.

Following is the letter sent to President Taft by Dr. Andrew:

Business at Standstill.
"Dear Mr. President: In presenting my resignation of the office with which you have favored me, I deem it proper to acquaint you with the conditions which have existed in the Treasury for the last two years at least, and which are of grave concern not only to every official of the Treasury, but also to the many thousands throughout the country who have business to conduct with this department.

"For a long time the transaction of much of the Treasury's business has been at a standstill and an outbreak of some kind has been imminent. Many able and energetic Treasury officials have had to bear the brunt of harsh criticism from people outside who have suffered interminable delays in their business with the Treasury, for which the Secretary alone was responsible, and at the same time they have had to submit to criticism even more harsh and more undeserved from Mr. MacVeagh himself, who, in an inability to transact that business at all, and that this has made it imperative for me to sever my relations with you and with the department.

"Sincerely yours,
"ATTY. ANDREW."
Action Creates Sensation.
The sudden resignation of Dr. Andrew and his letters, together with the White House statement, declaring the resignation was forced, created a profound sensation in Washington yesterday. A particularly sensational feature was that part of the letter to Secretary MacVeagh reminding him that Dr. Andrew had stood by him when he was about to be forced out of the Cabinet in December, 1910, when the President humiliated him by deciding, without consulting him, to remove him from the Treasury.

"I have sent him hundreds of letters and memoranda asking a decision in regard to matters urgently pending. On very rare occasions I have received a reply within a short time. In a few cases the replies have come only after a lapse of a month; in many cases only after a lapse of several months (when not infrequently the matters had already settled themselves), but in the majority of cases I have received no reply at all. Yet, like the other officials mentioned, who have been refused any opportunity for personal conference, I have been promptly criticized for my decision making or action taken.

"The conduct of business in a department under such conditions is, of course, impossible. The energetic young men whom Mr. MacVeagh has selected to replace him have been hampered and discouraged at every turn by his idiosyncrasies. His astounding capacity for procrastination, his incapacity for decision, and the peculiar moods of suspicion and aversion to which he is constantly subject.

"Dozens of instances could be cited where the public business has been seriously interfered with, important undertakings checked, and Treasury officials have been utterly disheartened by his opposition to a policy which he has persisted in on no other ground than an unreasonable aversion to the person who advocated or proposed it. It has been well understood in the Treasury that the advocacy of a proposition by certain officials was sure to arouse Mr. MacVeagh's opposition to it.

"If you wish for further evidence as to the peculiar difficulties which surround the handling of business in the Treasury, I venture to suggest that you ask Mr. Lawrence O. Murray, the Comptroller of the Currency, or Mr. Joseph E. Rulph, the director of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, or Mr. Leo McClung, the Treasurer of the United States, or Mr. Charles A. Kram, the auditor for the Postoffice, or Mr. Mr. Thomas E. Cabell, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, or Mr. James Knox Taylor, the supervising architect, or my distinguished predecessor in office, Mr. Charles D. Norton.

"For the foregoing reasons, whereby the transaction of all business pertaining to my office has become practically impossible, I beg with infinite regret to place my resignation as Assistant Secretary of the Treasury in your hands.

"Yours sincerely,
"A. PIATT ANDREW."

Tried to Be Loyal.

Dr. Andrew's letter to Secretary MacVeagh reads:

"Dear Mr. Secretary: I am to-day tendering my resignation of the position of Assistant Secretary of the Treasury. As you are well aware, I have for some time had this intention in mind.

"Your disposition, methods, and point of view are such as to render impossible any real co-operation or any satisfactory transaction of the government's business. During the two years in which I have been privileged to occupy this position, I have scores of times been refused access to you when it was necessary to present to you in person matters of urgent importance for the department, and for periods covering months at a time you have persistently refused either to speak with me or to answer letters or memoranda asking for an opinion or decision.

"Unfortunately for the work of the department this attitude has not been confined to your relations with me. From time to time, and without any apparent reason, you have shown the same disposition toward other officers of the Treasury.

matter of deep regret to me that difficulties of the character named have resulted not only in an inability to transact my share of the business of the department expeditiously and efficiently, but in an inability to transact that business at all, and that this has made it imperative for me to sever my relations with you and with the department.

On many occasions when heads of Treasury bureaus have been on the verge of appointing to the President or of resigning their positions, through disheartening because of months of delay and indecision on your part, I have done what I could to defend you and to encourage them. You cannot forget how stood by you when you were on the point of having taken from your hands what was probably the most important undertaking of your administration. When the White House, in December, 1910, without consulting with you, and entirely without your knowledge, entered into negotiations for an issue of Panama bonds, the embarrassment of the situation threatened to force your resignation. You will remember that I did everything in my power to avert your humiliation and that I loyally agreed to resign and leave the service with you if your resignation became necessary.

With Oldest Inhabitants.
Among the events which will occur at the meeting of the Oldest Inhabitants' Association this morning is the presentation of a large oil painting of the old David Burns cottage, which stood until recent years back of the White House. The ground upon which this place is built belonged to Burns, and he refused to sell the land at the price offered, and compelled Gen. Washington and others to have Congress condemn the parcel.

Mr. Allison Naylor, whose late husband was the president of the association for a number of years, gives them the picture, to be presented by Mr. Joseph I. Keefe, who will read an article upon the life of Burns and his son-in-law, John P. Van Ness.

Police to Enforce Rules.
The police will keep a sharp lookout to-day for persons violating the law with respect to the discharge of fireworks. Maj. Sylvester, Superintendent of Police, yesterday issued the annual order with respect to the enforcement of the law on the Fourth. He suggested that if small children are found violating the law they should be warned. The following parents, however, that mature persons who are fully responsible for their actions should be arrested without leniency being shown.

Money for Militia.
The Senate yesterday passed the special bill appropriating $1,250,000 for the expenses of militia organizations participating in the joint maneuvers with the army this summer, and these exercises will take place as planned. In many States they are due to begin this week, and it was feared for some time that owing to the regular army bill having been vetoed, that it would be necessary to cancel all arrangements for the joint maneuvers. The sum appropriated is identical with that provided in the vetoed bill. The special bill was passed by the House and Senate at the request of the President and Secretary of War Stimson.
